

Outlaws Played Out

The last refuge of the gangs of outlaws which formerly infested the whole of the Western country is in the Indian Territory. We are taking in the few of them yet left there, and all of them seem to be no better than triffers. Look at the outlaws of Bill Cook's gang, who yelled like mad last year as they dashed after a stray traveller, or picked up a chicken, a lost sheep, a wandering pony, or a gun. When the great Bill himself was caught along about New Year's time, he turned out to be no better than a spook and never made a fight, but dropped his gun and got off his pony, and surrendered at discretion to a superior force of three deputy marshals. He let the enemy tie his legs, throw him into a wagon, and cart him off to jail, where he is now languishing. The pitiful humbug was no more like the old-timers than a mouse is like a roaring lion. There is a meaner case yet. When Cook had been carted off, and his gang had reformed, a wilder desperado, Cherokee Bill, started out to raise another gang of outlaws. He had just got his gang all ready for ravaging things among the civilized Indians when a couple of deputy marshals were told to look for him. After a week of looking, they got close to Cherokee Bill the terror, who was armed with a Winchester rifle and two six-shooters, with headquarters near Nowata, not far from Wagner. One of the two deputy marshals, armed with a club, sprang at the outlaw, knocked him down, chained his hands and feet, got him into a handy conveyance, took him to Fort Smith, and brought along the Winchester and the six-shooters. Cherokee Bill's style was as mean as Bill Cook's. The very best part of the story remains to be told. The two United States deputy marshals who captured the blusterer and broke up his gang were darkies! Serves him right.

Such are the kind of fellows who have taken the place of the terrorists, first Spaniards then Americans, who once made merry with travelers and settlers upon the Western plains. The whole thing is played out.—N. F. Sun.

[Action for divorce.]

Now at this day comes the plaintiff by her attorney and shows to the satisfaction of the court that defendant has absented himself from his usual place of abode in this state, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him.

And unless he be and appear at the next term of said court, to be held for said County of Iron, State of Missouri, on the fourth Monday in April next, and on or before the third day thereof, (if the term shall so long continue; and, if not, then before the end of the term), and plead to said plaintiff's petition, the same will be against him as confessed.

It is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the IRON COUNTY REGISTER, a weekly newspaper published in said County of Iron, State of Missouri, and this cause is continued.
